WHY DANA WAS NOT CONFIRM-ED.

Some of the independent newspapers are consuring the Senate for allowing itself to be "led by the car" by General Butler and voting against the confirmation of Mr Dana. But it now seems that the larger part of those who voted against Mr. Dana were Democrats. The New York Herald, in endeavoring to account for the action of the Democrats, says:

As it new stands, the only intelligent reason for the opposition of the Democratic Senators to Mr. Dana's confirma tion is, that he opposed secession. If any other reason exists let us know it This is a dreadful record to make at the outset of a canvass for the Presidency.

CONKLING'S FASTIDIOUS NOSE.

Washington corr spondence Cleveland

A funny little mendent concerning Senator Conkling came to my knowl edge to-day. He was dining at Worm-ley's, sitting alone at his table. A gen tleman who knows him intimately pass ed down the during room, and not having seen him since the New York convention, my friend stopped to offer con gratulations, taking a vacant chair boside Mr Conkling The congratulathe usual warmth manifested in the succooling chat, the Sonator evidently had something unpleasant upon his mind, he fidgeted with his napkin, toy. ed with his fork, looked longingly at the dainties before him but never tast. od them Finally looking up with a disgusted face, he said "Really, my friend, excuse me, but—you are saturated with nicotine!" Of course my friend departed instanter. How in the world with such exquisite sensibilities has the honorable gentleman endured the sights and smells and general abominations of elections?

WHAT is to be Lyon's reward here bolow? His statement in the Schenok onve looked formidable enough in the start, but it has since been so trim med and modified and mutilated that noth-

This old woman declares that the ghost of the poor darkey can be seen at night, rising from the bottom of the barge (it is overturned in the river) and standing there in plain sight. Her statements have caused great excitement among the colored people, who, it is well known, are superstitious beyond belief, and the haunted spot is avoided at night like a yawning grave yard. It is hardly probable that the body of the drowned man still remains under the barge, as the swift current would have swept it away before this, but seeme groos cannot be made to believe it and their superstitions will not be allayed until the barge is taken away - Boone-

No sketch of the late A. T. Stowart would be complete which fails to make mention of the offer to him of the position of Secretary of the Treas ury, by President Grant, on the organization of the Cabinet, in 1869. The President had long regarded him as a special personal friend, while the figure call ability displayed in the managemended him for a position of this character. Mr. Stewart, there is reason-to believe, was disposed to the people the position, but was found to be incligible in consequence of the existence of an old forgotten law prohibiting the appointment of a person engaged in commerce at the head of the Treasury Department. The President suggested the repeal or modification of this act, structed by Whitely to call on Nettle-but Congress very properly declined to ship for a job; was taken to Washing act upon the suggestion; and thus he ton, where he was informed that said was compelled to give up his cherished job was cracking a safe in the District purpose of placing Mr. Stewart at the Attorney's office, struck a bargain and head of the Financial Department of Miles employed Benton to assist him the Government.

little city of Macon was in a perfect hubble of excitoment last week, over the approaching municipal election, which took place on Monday of this week. The question at issue was license or anti-license, and each party had a full ticket in the field. The naked question of license itself was to be voted on, and when the votes were counted out, the tally-list showed a majority of two against license. But the funny part of the story remains to be told - the vote on mayo and aldermen was a tle. Our informant says the excitement kept up until yesterday, when the rival candidates for mayor, Chas. A.
